Summer Field School in Ethnography MÉRIDA + PISTÉ, YUCATAN, MÉXICO

[7 Weeks, July 4 to August 17, 2004]

Offering up to 14 credits in Anthropology, Ethnography, Independent Research, and Spanish or Maya Language.

The program is ideal for undergraduate and graduate students in anthropology, Latin American studies programs, cultural studies and related humanities fields who want an intensive field research experience.

The program combines classroom based seminars on topics in cultural anthropology and ethnography with experiential learning at different heritage sites and with fieldwork experience conducting independent ethnographic research.

Conversational courses in Spanish and Yucatec Maya language are offered.

Included in the program are interactive learning experiences based on educational field trips to Chichén Itzá, Uxmal, Kabah, a colonial hacienda, the town of Oxkutzcab, and Mérida.

Students live in Home-stays with Maya families, experience language and cultural immersion, and design and conduct their own Independent Research Project during the summer program.

Work Exchange Assistantships are available for graduate students (tuition reduction).

Application Deadline: May 24, 2004.

Ethnography Writer's Workshop MÉRIDA, YUCATAN, MÉXICO

[May 31 to June 27, 2004]

Escape the routine to the OSEA Workshop in Mérida. Participants bring a writing project that needs to be completed (chapter, journal article, research proposal, conference paper, etc.) in any field of cultural focused humanities or social science.

OSEA Staff are experienced reviewing for major academic journals and university presses and provide expert guidance, feedback and intellectual stimulation to aid your writing. Supplementary seminars on writing and publishing strategies are arranged according to the needs and interests of participants and group.

Down time can be spent relaxing in OSEA garden and pool, enjoying the attractions of Mérida, Mexico, and taking short weekend excursions to archaeological and cultural heritage sites in the Maya world of Yucatán.

Workshop is ideal for grads and professors needing to devote full time and all energy to writing and who want the intellectual exchange and stimulation of a small group of scholars dedicated to the task of completing a publication project.

Resident participants are offered lodging, all meals except weekend dinners, and a comfortable setting to work and to develop their writing projects.

Application Deadline: April 10, 2004.
After deadline inquire on space available.
